I Fixed-Size Data. Every programming language comes with a language of data and a language of operations on data. The first language always provides some forms of atomic data; to represent the variety of information in the real world as data, a programmer must learn to compose basic data and to describe such compositions.

In the last chapter we learned that deep neural networks are often much harder to train than shallow neural networks. That's unfortunate, since we have good reason to believe that if we could train deep nets they'd be much more powerful than shallow nets. But while the news from the last chapter is discouraging, we won't let it stop us.

For the most part I'm going to stick with the graphical point of view. But in what follows you may sometimes find it helpful to switch points of view, and think about things in terms of if-then-else.. We can use our bump-making trick to get two bumps, by gluing two pairs of hidden neurons together into the same network:

Glaucoma is a disease where the optic nerve dies. We are not sure why or how this happens (there are many mechanical, vascular, and biochemical theories) but high intraocular pressure certainly seems to be associated, if not entirely the cause, of optic nerve death. Glaucoma is one of the leading causes of preventable blindness in [...]
